ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Leung Shum began his Kung Fu training at the age of eight under the direction of his godfather, Grandmaster Ng Wai Nung. Sifu Shum practiced Northern Eagle Claw and Wu Style Tai Chi Chuan for more than 25 years before coming to the United States and opening his school in New York City. He is considered the leading authority on Northern Eagle Claw in the United States and the author of the first English language writing on the subject, entitled "Eagle Claw Kung—Fu: Classical Northern Chinese Fist."

TAICHI THEORY

The following is derived from a translation of the classical writings concerning Tai Chi which are said to date back to the Ming Dynasty (approx. 1362).

Tai Chi {the Supreme Ultimate} arises from Wu Chi (the formless). It is the origin of movement and quietude, and the mother of Yin and Yang.

In movement they separate and in quietude they close. There should be no excess, no insufficiency. Yield to your opponents advances and adhere when he retreats. When the other's movement comes quickly, respond quickly; when the other's movement comes slowly, respond slowly. The techniques change but this principle remains constant.

Through the process of long and diligent practice, there comes an understanding of the "internal force." From this understanding, comes a "spiritual illumination". But you will not understand this without much time and effort.

The top of the head is empty, alert and still. The breath sinks to the "dan tien". The body is not inclined, leaning, bending or stretching. The opponent cannot detect as you become "empty" where he attacks, and you become "solid" and follow him when he retreats. The body becomes so sensitive that the weight of a fly landing on you sets you in motion—shifting from solid to empty.

Stand as a balanced scale, move like a wheel. Keep one leg heavy, one leg light. If the weight is kept on both legs, you will never have good results. To avoid this you must know Yin and Yang. To "adhere" is also to withdraw, and to withdraw is also to "adhere". Yin does not leave Yang and Yang does not leave Yin. Yin and Yang necessarily complement each other and one does not exist without the other. You will understand the "internal force" if you understand this concept.

The mind directs the breath, and orders it to sink so that it may be gathered into the bones. Then, the breath moves the body freely, following the desire of the mind. When you want to use the "chi", sink the breath deeply, but remain relaxed and quiet, and then concentrate in a single direction toward the opponent. When you are standing, the body must be straight, relaxed and balanced so that you may protect yourself from all directions. When you use this energy, it is like finely refined steel—able to defeat all hardness. In appearance be like an eagle swooping down upon a rabbit; in spirit, as a cat catching a mouse.

When quiet, be like a mountain; when moving, like water running in a great river.

Storing up breath is like drawing a bow; releasing it is like shooting an arrow. Find the straight, from the curved. When you move back and forth, the body must have folds. When you advance and retreat, you must have turns and changes. If you can regulate the inhalation and exhalation, then the body can be light and lively.

The mind gives the command; the breath goes forth as the banner, and the waist executes the command.

If the opponent does not move, then you do not move. If the opponent moves even slightly, then you move faster than him.

The energy is rooted in the feet, it passes through the legs, is controlled and directed by the waist, and emerges in the fingers.

All parts of the body must be thought of as connected, like a string of pearls.

IMPORTANT POINTS OF TAI CHI PRACTICE

If you practice Tai-Chi diligently, you will find that your body will be better able to resist the heat of summer and the cold of winter. You will have more resistance to illness. It improves thinking ability, concentration and hastens your mental and physical responses. Practicing Tai Chi everyday moderates the temperament and reduces both mental and physical fatigue. The practice of Tai Chi breathing will result in improved respiration and circulation. The blood will circulate through the body freely. There will be improvements in digestion and metabolism. Tai Chi will strengthen the body and prolong youthfulness.

Among the most important and basic aspects of Tai Chi Chuan are the Eight Powers and the Five Internal and Five External positions.

The Eight Powers are: (1) Ward-Off, (2) Roll Back, (3) Press, (4) Push, (5) Pull Down, (6) Split, (7) Elbowing, and (8) Shouldering.

The Five Internal positions are: (1) Sticking, (2) Attaching, (3) Joining, (4) Following, and (5) Neither letting go nor resisting.

The Five External positions are: (1) Step Forward, (2) Step Backward, (3) Look Left, (4) Look Right, and (5) Stand centered.

Tai Chi Chuan should be performed in a slow and gentle manner. In every movement the entire body must be light and comfortable, and it is especially important that all parts of the body function together,

At dawn, when beginning to practice Tai Chi, the best direction is facing north because the north gives off ultra-violet rays which are beneficial.

To understand Tai Chi power, you need to understand the meaning of: "as hard as steel, as soft as cotton; as slow and steady as chasing after an ant."

GAH GEE AND GOON CHUEN

What is Gah Gee (Slow Form.) It is the iron, wood, or bamboo used to build a house. As with any structure, it's the foundation that must be strong. If it's not, the house will fall down. So it is with the practice of Tai Chi Chuan Gah Gee -every movement, each position must be clear. Without careful attention, there can be no strong foundation on which to build. When beginning to practice the slow form, study the photographs and follow the description of the movements. Go slowly. Each day learn only one technique, never attempting to learn more than 10 movements. If you practice every day, in about 6 months you should complete the 108 techniques of the Wu Style Tai Chi Chuan.

When you first begin to learn the form, pay special attention to the following points:

Body-Straight, relaxed, loose, soft.

Feet- Pointing straight ahead, shoulder distance apart.

Hands-Relaxed by the sides of the legs.

Head-Straight, facing front.

Mind—Relax the mind. Don't think of anything.

Chest -Relax.

Back -Rounded.

Eyes—Half-closed, but the spirit inside excited.

Face-Keep a slight smile.

Tongue-Touch to upper palate.

Breath-Use the nose, not the mouth. Take three slow deep breaths, directing each breath to the Dan Tien.

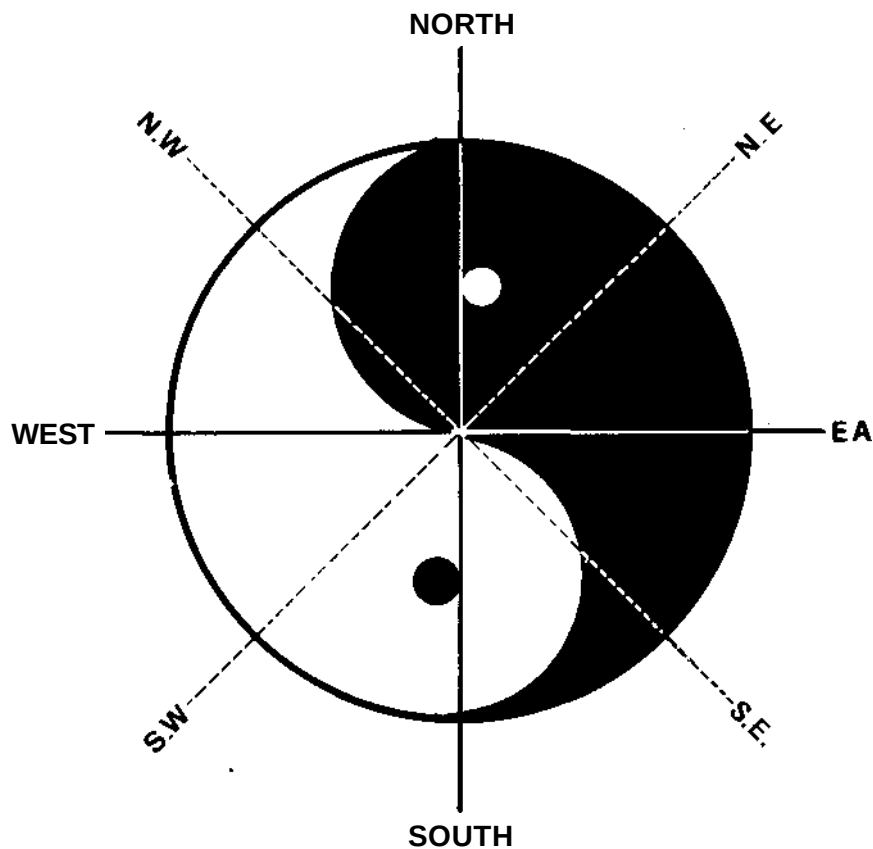

Before beginning the slow form, remind yourself of each of these points.

After you have completed learning the 108 movements, continue to practice for a few months. Remember to follow the movement as shown in the photographs, one by one. After a time the movement will begin to become smooth. When very smooth, try to connect the techniques. When one movement is completed, immediately begin the next. After some practice, when the connected form begins to feel more comfortable, start to pay special attention to the circle in each movement. You won't find a complete circle in every technique. Perhaps there will be only a half-circle or a quarter-circle, but be aware that each and every movement is rounded. With more practice, the form will become very smooth, like water running in a great river. When, from beginning to end, the whole form is connected and there is no stopping from the first technique to the last, only then does it become Goon Chuen (Fast Form) of Tai Chi Chuan.

104. FA AN SUN ON
Turn, Press Down

反身按

1. Twist waist to right, pivoting on left heel. Turn 180° to walking stance (facing east). Arms follow waist.

Shift weight forward to right leg. Left hand drops to meet right hand.

3. Hands make a complete inward circle and then press down. Right hand forms fist, facing up, left palm facing down.

105. GO TAM MA

Test Horse From Above

高探馬

1. Left arm circles up and to the left. Step in with left leg to walking stance as left arm continues to circle down, cutting to rib position. Right hand circles up to right ear, fingers pointing east.

106. DAI LUM JUK MEI

Great Caress The Bird's Tail

大攏雀尾

1. Shift weight forward to left leg. Right arm circles forward crossing at left elbow position.

Right arm extends forward, circling until it is straight, left hand touching right wrist. Sit back on right leg and drop arms slightly, turning them over. Right palm facing up.

3. Shift weight forward to left leg. Step in with right leg to walking stance.

4. Twist waist to left. Weight shifts forward to right foot.

5. Twist waist back to right, right arm straight. Right hand angled slightly to left. Left hand touches right wrist.

6. Sit back on left leg into walking stance. Right thumb in front of nose.

7. Right palm turns downward. Drop arms until left elbow touches body.

8. Press forward. Right wrist is shoulder height. Right palm faces front, left hand still touches right wrist.

107. DUN BIN
Single Whip

單鞭

1. Right hand circles to left. Finger tips come together forming a hook. Right foot pivots on heel to front. Left leg steps out to side.

Twist waist to left. Left arm, palm facing eyes, circles left. Left hand turns out facing corner. Weight equal on both legs.

108. HUH IAI UtK

 合太極

1. Twist waist to left. Right arm circles to the left and then out to the right, palm facing out, as left leg steps back. Weight forward on right leg. Left arm circles back to the side.

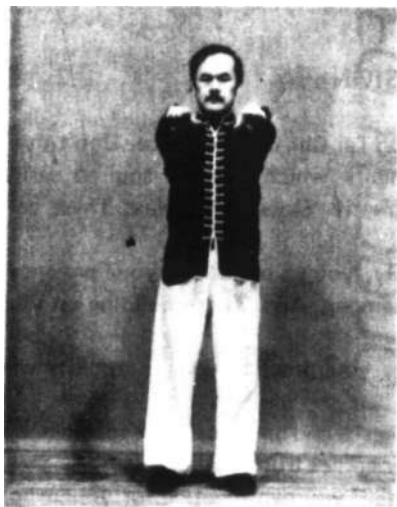

3. Shift weight back to right leg as right arm circles up, left arm circles back.

2. Shift weight back to left leg. Step back with right leg. Weight forward on left leg. Arms switch positions.

4. Circle left arm up to meet right arm at shoulder height.

5. Slide left foot back to meet right foot, shoulder distance, as you stand up.

6. Drop elbows until arms touch body, hands shoulder height.

7. Drop hands to side. Fingers angled slightly forward.

8. Turn hands so palms are touching legs. Three deep breaths.

CONCLUSION

You need to approach the practice of Tai Chi with patience. Don't think of Tai Chi as just a series of movements which can be aquired easily. Once you've decided, to begin, begin correctly. Slow, soft, relax. These concepts must be understood.

Slow— When you practice slowly, you're practicing your patience. You are exercising your temper. And you're building up your chi.

Soft— When you practice softly, you practice your internal power. Softness leads to strength.

Relax— Learn how to relax the heart and practice how to make the mind quiet. Internal power comes from a quiet mind.

Above all, don't rush. If you enjoy Tai Chi, you can practice for your whole life.

The 108 postures of the Wu Style are carefully depicted in the photographs in this book. Each technique has been broken down into separate parts. This will make it easier for the person who really wants to learn Tai Chi but hasn't the time to practice in a Kung Fu School. It's also for someone who has learned the form before, but forgotten, or somebody who is just beginning to learn and isn't sure if the movements are correct. Toward these ends, this book will be helpful, but certainly, finding a good Sifu is the best way to learn Tai Chi. You can learn only so much from any book and Tai Chi contains much that must be learned. For example:

Slow Form—Sets the foundation. Makes the body strong.

Fast Form—Teaches how to make the power run smoothly.

Push Hands—Trains your "listening power" and teaches how to use the techniques for self-protection. There are several kinds of push hands exercises, and each one has a different purpose and method of practice.

Tai Chi Partner Form—Teaches the basics of self defense.

Sword and Sabre Forms—Teaches how to use a weapon for fighting, and how to extend the chi.

It will take much time to develop a good Tai Chi form. Practice for a full year and you'll understand only 10% of the system. Practice for two years and you'll find that you are healthier than when you began. Practice for three years and you'll find your internal organs getting stronger and therefore you will not get sick as easily. Practice more than three years and you'll find yourself beginning to understand more deeply, this treasure of Chinese Kung Fu.

Many people today are interested in Tai Chi only as an exercise for health.

They have no interest or time to learn how to protect themselves with Tai Chi Chuan. The Tai Chi System has lost much because of this. Many with little knowledge themselves are teaching others. When you really want to learn Tai Chi, find a good Sifu. Not one who has only read much about Tai Chi, but one with a deep understanding.

You won't find in this book a history of the system or a thorough discussion of Tai Chi.

There are many books that contain this information. It is unnecessary to repeat it in yet another book. I do want everybody who wants to learn, to learn well from these photographs of the Wu Style Gah Gee.
